2. A definition and example of one major genre or piece type that you have covered in the module set for the week
3. A response to one of the music pieces you have heard during class or on the Covach textbook support website
<<http://www2.wwnorton.com/college/music/rockhistory/welcome.htm>> that you have covered in the module set for the week.

Keep a personal record of all the pieces that you post on the StudyDesk. Please take time to read the responses logged by other students in the class – you might like to interact with the responses and start up an online conversation.

Essay

Description	Marks out of	Wtg(%)	Due date
Essay 2000 words	100	40	19 October 2009

1. Select one progressive or 'art' rock band of the 1970s. Discuss their development, their musical characteristics and make some detailed commentary on two tracks.
2. How have music arrangers and production engineers contributed to the finished product on commercially released recordings? Is their work sufficiently acknowledged in the creation of 'band myths'? In your essay discuss two specific albums.
3. Select a solo artist or band from the period 1970-2000. Outline how this artist or group has advanced the development of rock music with supporting, relevant musical evidence.
4. Mainstream trends in rock and popular music frequently trigger reactions in underground or fringe movements, which in turn become mainstream. Discuss this phenomenon in relation to two bands active during the 1990s.
5. Musical trends in rock music have become increasingly varied during the period from 1970 to the present, yet some genres remain recognisably similar over many years. Based on your observations of music since the turn of the 21st century, how is popular music likely to develop further? Refer to specific songs in your reflection.
6. How are the stylistic trends of popular music covered in this course, reflected in the popular music of your home country? Are there any elements in the music that demonstrate local flavour and identify? (This question is designed especially for students originating outside Australia, the US, or Britain.)
